

CONTENTS

Foreword	v
Abstract	vi
Acknowledgments	vii
1. Introduction	1
2. Evaluating program impact: a framework	6
The empirical model	11
Estimation strategy	12
Why might credit program participation be endogenous?	14
Econometric approach	15
Identification of the impact of gender-specific credit	21
3. Survey design	24
Data description	26
4. Results	28
5. Summary and conclusions	40
Tables	45
Appendix A	63
Appendix B	95
Appendix C	105
References	107