

Contents

Foreword	xiii
Acknowledgments	xv
Acronyms and Abbreviations	xvii
Overview	1
Trends in Poverty in the Region, 1998–2003	4
Factors Contributing to Poverty Reduction, 1998–2003	16
Nonincome Dimensions of Well-Being, 1998–2003	22
Prospects for Poverty Reduction	29
The Role for Public Policy	34
Conclusions	41
1. Nature and Evolution of Poverty, 1998–2003	47
Introduction	47
Consumption Poverty	51
Poverty in Nonincome Dimensions	67
Conclusions	76
2. How Has Poverty Responded to Growth?	79
Growth and Poverty Reduction	80
Growth Elasticities, or, How Responsive Is Poverty Reduction to Growth?	81

Changes in Distribution, What Happened and Why	87
The Relative Shares of Growth and Changes in Distribution in Poverty Reduction	90
Rural-Urban and Other Subnational Differences in Poverty Reduction	92
Conclusions	96
3. The Role of Labor Markets and Safety Nets	107
How the Poor Can Connect to Growth	107
Economic Opportunities Have Expanded	110
The Poor Took Advantage of New Opportunities	119
Why Are Many Workers in the Region Still Poor?	129
Conclusions and Policy Recommendations	140
4. Affordable Access to Quality Services	147
Education	149
Access to, and Affordability of, Health Services	161
Energy and Other Utility Services	171
Conclusions	183
5. Prospects for Poverty Reduction	189
Alternative Scenarios for Growth, Poverty Reduction, and Inequality	189
Patterns of Growth: Implications for Growth and Inequality	195
The Role for Public Policy	203
Conclusions	213
Appendix	219
A. Data and Methodology	215
B. Key Poverty Indicators	236
Bibliography	279
Index	293