

INDICE

Definitions and data notes	ix
Financial Systems and development: an overview
The economic background	1
Origins of financial distress	2
Prerequisites for financial development
Institutions and markets	3
The path to reform	4
Outline of the report	5
1 Adjustment and growth in the 1980s and 1990s
The international economic environment	6
Structural adjustment policies and challenges	10
Development	14
Growth prospects	19
2 Why does finance matter?	25
Finance and growth	26
Risks and costs of finance	32
Government intervention	35
The structure of the financial system	37
3 The evolution of financial systems
Development of payment systems	41
Development of trade finance	42
The impact of large-scale industrialization	44
Financial crises	45
Financial systems in developing countries	47
Financial regulation after world war II	49
Financial innovation since the 1970s	51
Current policy concerns in industrial countries	52
4 Financial sector issues in developing countries	54
Government intervention in credit allocation	55
Macroeconomic policies and financial development	61
The task of financial reform	69
5 Financial systems in distress	70
Economic consequences of financial distress	72
Roots of financial distress	75
Lessons of financial restructuring	77
6 Foundations of financial systems
Financial contracts and debt recovery	84
Developing the legal foundations	85
Timely and accurate accounts	90
Prudential regulation of financial institutions and markets	91
7 Developing financial systems
Financing investment	96
Building financial institutions and markets	102
Priorities for reform	111
8 Issues in informal finance	112
Informal financial arrangements	113
Semiformal finance	116

Improving finance for the noncorporate sector	118
9 Toward more liberal and open financial systems
Recent experiences with financial reform	122
Lessons of reform	127
Components of financial reform	128
Conclusions of the report	132
Bibliographical note	133
Statistical appendix	145
World development indicators	155