

INDICE

Acknowledgements	vii
Executive summary	ix
Résumé analytique	xiii
Resumen	xix
Acronyms and abbreviations	xxiii
1. Maternal and child health in Bangladesh: a record of success	1
Scope of the study	3
Evaluation approach
Overview of the report	5
2. Health, family planning, and nutrition services in Bangladesh: and overview	7
Family planning programs
Health services	10
Nutrition	12
3. Trends in under-five mortality, nutrition, and fertility
Patterns of mortality decline
Anthropometric outcomes	13
What has been happening to fertility?
4. Impact of specific interventions on child health and fertility
Income growth accounts for some, but not all, improvements in outcomes	17
Under-five mortality	19
Fertility reduction	26
Nutrition	28
5. A closer look at nutrition: the Bangladesh integrated nutrition project	29
Overview of the project
Project coverage and targeting	30
Acquiring knowledge	33
Turning knowledge into practice: the knowledge-practice gap	34
The nutritional impact of BINP interventions	36
Testing the theory in practice-how well did the causal chain operate?	38
6. Lessons learned	41
Annexes
A. Trends in maternal and child health outcomes	45
B. Cross-country analysis of child health and nutrition outcomes	49
C. Neonatal, postnatal, and child mortality in the 1990s	65
D. Child malnutrition during the 1990s	109
E. Women's agency, household structure, and health outcomes	125
F. Fertility	139
G. Analysis of BINPs community-based nutrition component	155
H. DFID and world bank programs in Bangladesh	187
I. Agricultural production, natural	193
J. Approach paper	199
Endnotes	207
References	219