

INDICE

Acknowledgments	IV
Acronyms and Abbreviations	IV
Foreword	V
1. Overview	1
1.1. Contexto f the Paper	1
1.2. Strategic Elements of power Market reform	1
Element 1: Power market Reform Has Many dimensions	2
Element 2: Power Market Reform Mkust Be Adapted to Starting Conditions	3
Element 3: Power Market Reform Is a Process – Not an Event	4
Element 4: Power Market Reforms I san opportunity to help the poor	6
2. Contexto of Power Market Reform in Developing Countries	9
2.1. The techno – Economic basis for power market reform in developing Countries	10
The general case for reform	10
The case of developing countries	12
2.2. The importante of political factors for power market reform	14
The politcal nature of power market reform	14
The political incentives to reform	16
Political issues for reforming power markets	18
3. Current Extent and Outcomes of Power Market Reform in Developing Countries	21
3.1. The extent of power market reform	31
3.2. Classification of developing countries by power market reform	27
3.3. The rise and fallo f private investment	29
3.4. Outcomes of power market reform	31
Better service quality for electricity consumers	33
Improvement in government´ s fiscal p3sition	33
Affordable access to electricity for the poor	35
4. Enterprise Restructurind and Corporate Governance	37
4.1. Corporate Governance and Commercialization	38
4.2. Conditions for justifiable public investment	42
4.3. Private sector participation	43
Private sector roles	44
Conditions for sustainable private investment	46
4.4. Improving the feasibility of privatizing distribution	48
Whaat in being privatizad	49
The prospective private participants	50
When privatization should be conducted	52
Risk mitigation options	52
5. Market Structure and Governance	59
5.1. Importance of the market struture for market governance	59
5.2. Restructuring power supply	60
Purchasing Agency – Single Buyer	62
Restructurins small power Systems	64
5.3. Experience with independent power producers	66
Impact of independdent power producers	37

Sustainable conditions for independent power producers	69
5.4. The role of competition in power markets	71
Characteristics of competition in the power market	71
Wholesale power trade	73
Competition in the power markets of developing countries	76
6. Regulation of Power Markets	79
6.1. The need for public regulation of power markets	79
6.2. Institutional Approaches to power market regulation	80
6.3. Regulatory credibility for private investment	83
6.4. Regulation by contract to support a new regulatory regime	86
6.5. Incentive regulation to promote efficiency	88
7. Access and Affordability to Electricity Services	91
7.1. Context and background	91
7.2. Reform policies for improving Access and affordability	93
7.3. Removing Regulatory and Institutional Constraints on Electricity services	94
Regulation of electricity markets serving low – Income Users	95
Institutional Reforms for supporting access and Affordability	96
7.3. Financial Viability and Affordability	98
Reducing service costs	98
Designing appropriate Tariffs	99
Subsidizing Electricity Services to Low – Income Households	101
8. Implementing Power Market Reform	107
8.1. Challenges for implementing power market reform	107
8.2. Government Roles and responsibilities	109
8.3. Sequencing of power market reform	111
8.4. The transition stage for power market reforms	115
The importance of starting conditions	115
Quick versus gradual Approaches to reforming power Markets	115
Reform road map	119
Appendix: Reform of power markets in OECD countries	121
Glossary	127
References	137
Further Reading	161