

Contents

Foreword	v
Acknowledgments	vii
1. Introduction	1
2. Institutional Requirements for Effective Consumer Participation	5
Regulatory Independence	5
Consumer Representation	7
3. Performing Regulatory Functions vis-à-vis Consumers	15
Informing Consumers	16
Disclosing Information	16
Raising Consumer Awareness	16
Resolving Consumer Complaints	18
Soliciting Consumer Input	20
4. Contracting Out Regulatory Functions vis-à-vis Consumers	23
Informing Consumers	23
Resolving Consumer Complaints	24
Soliciting Consumer Input	27
5. Involving the Poor in the Regulatory Process	29
Pro-poor Awareness Campaigns	31
Partnership Arrangements	32
6. Conclusions	33
Appendixes	37
A. Sample Description	39
B. Survey	43
References	51

List of Figures

2.1. Options for Consumer Representation in the EAP Region.....	11
3.1. Measures to Enhance Transparency.....	17
3.2. Channels of Communications with Consumers	18
3.3. Resolving Consumer Complaints—The Role of the Regulator	19
3.4. Consumer Input to the Regulatory Process	21
3.5. Mechanisms to Solicit Consumer Input	21
4.1. Effectiveness of Intermediaries in Raising Consumer Awareness.....	24
4.2. First Port of Call for Handling Consumer Complaints.....	26
5.1. Pro-poor Regulatory Framework.....	31

List of Tables

2.1. Mechanisms for Consumer Representation	10
6.1. Consumer Participation in Infrastructure Regulation.....	35

List of Boxes

1. Ladder of Consumer Participation in the Regulatory Process	2
2. Independence of the Regulatory Agency.....	6
3. Examples of Consumer Representation in the EAP Region	12
4. Designing a Pro-poor Regulatory Strategy	30
5. Papua New Guinea Community Service Obligations	32