

Contents

Executive Summary	1
Engaging Young People as Credible and Informed Stakeholders	3
Overview of the Small Grants Program	5
The Learning Survey on Youth and Civic Engagement in the Latin America and Caribbean Region	10
Young People as Development Actors	10
Lessons Learned	19
Conclusion	22
Notes	23
Appendix 1: Learning Survey Questionnaire.....	24
Appendix 2: List of Surveys Received from Small Grants Grantees.....	26
Appendix 3: Small Grants Program–Country Offices Fiscal Year 2006.....	27

Acknowledgments

Several people ushered this report to completion. Yumi Sera provided the guidance and editorial assistance. Latin America and Caribbean Region Social Development and Civil Society Specialists provided the inspiration and championed the youth development initiatives that made this report possible. We would especially like to thank Jairo Arboleda, Sandra Cessilini, Maria Magdalena Colmenares, Elizabeth Dasso, Pilar Larreamendy, and Lisandro Martin, who were the early champions of the Small Grants Program’s focus on youth development. Shelton Davis and Mi Hyun Bae undertook the initial research and data collection. Carolina Callinicos translated the surveys. Kris Rusch wrote the final report. Peer review comments were received from Jario Arboleda, Carter Brandon, Teresa Carlsson, Elizabeth Dasso, and William Reuben, while Jeff Thindwa provided the supervision and final review for the report. We would also like to thank Elizabeth Acul and Daniela Fernandez for their support to the Small Grants Program. Silvia Sanusian and Monica Barros translated the document from English to Spanish. We would like to acknowledge the commitment of Country Office directors, staff, and stakeholders worldwide who work on behalf of the Small Grants Program. The youth activities mentioned in this document demonstrate that youths as a subsector represent an emerging social actor in the region. Therefore lastly, but most importantly, we would like to thank the civil society organizations and especially the youth leaders involved in Small Grants Program projects and organizations, who shared their innovative projects and lessons.