

INDICE

Executive summary	1
1. Introduction
The benefits of participation	3
The costs of participation
2. Lessons from bank and GEF experiences	7
3. Creating an enabling environment
Defining a national forestry and conservation agenda	14
Devolving resources and authority
Administrative reforms
4. Facilitating local participation in project design, Implementation and evaluation
Gathering appropriate information	17
Local knowledge and technology
Creating a consensus
Participatory monitoring and evaluation
Annexes
1. World bank-financed forestry projects with social and participation components, by region	24
2. Social and participation components of selected bank-and GEF/bank-financed forestry and biodiversity conservation projects, 1990-95
3. Selected international and regional forestry and conservation networks
References	32