

INDICE

List of Tables	VII
Cases Cited	IX
Foreword	XI
Abstract	XIII
Acknowledgments	XV
Acronyms and Abbreviations	XVII
Part One. General Overview
Chapter 1. Introduction, Characteristics, and Scope	3
1.1. The Notion of Landlocked States	4
1.2. Historical Characteristics	6
1.3. Geopolitical Features	7
1.4. Economic and Developmental Challenges	13
1.5. Thematic Concerns and Scope	22
Part Two. Theoretical Bases
Chapter 2. Principles, Doctrines, and Theories Influencing the Right of Access to the Sea	27
2.1. Theory Based on the Freedom of Transit	28
2.2. Free Access and the Principle of Freedom of the Seas	30
2.3. Right of Access as an International Servitude	31
2.4. Right Compensating for Geographical Inequalities	35
2.5. Freedom of River Navigation	37
Part Three. Evolution of the Regime
Chapter 3. Evolution of International Law	47
3.1. Freedom of Transit for Trade: The Barcelona State	48
3.2. The Railway Case (Traffic between Lithuania and Poland)	50
3.3. Freedom of Transit Strengthened: The Havana Charter and the GATT	56
3.4. Reciprocity to Right of Access: The Convention on the High Seas	59
3.5. Free Access Versus Territorial Sovereignty and the New York Convention	66
3.6. Right to Secure Access Under UNCLOS III	75
3.7. Enforcement of the Right of Access Under International Instruments	96
Chapter 4. Influence of International Law on State Practice	118
4.1. Treaties Concluded in Europe	118
4.2. Treaties Concluded in Africa	120
4.3. Treaties Concluded in Latin America	123
4.4. Treaties Concluded in Asia	126
Chapter 5. "Soft" Instruments and Specific Initiatives: Variation in Themes	130
5.1. International "Soft Law" Mechanisms	130
5.2. Specific Initiatives for Resource Allocation	134
5.3. Pluridimensionality in Facilitating Access	140
Part Four. Conclusion
Chapter 6. A Better Future for All	149
6.1. Customary Law in Existence	149
6.2. Relativism in Progress	150
6.3. Pragmatism in Decision – Making	151

Select Bibliography	153
Appendix One: Convention and Statute on the Regime of Navigable Waterways of International Concern	163
Appendix Two: United Nations Conference on Transit Trade of Land – Locked Countries	179
Appendix Three: United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea (UNCLOS III): Part X – Right of Access of Land – Locked States to and from Sea and Freedom of Transit	190
Index	193