

Contents

PREFACE		5
MESSAGE OF THE DIRECTOR-GENERAL OF UNESCO		7
	The role of the media is vital in ensuring good governance	7
INTRODUCTION	The right to inform and be informed	9
PART 1 THE LINK BETWEEN GOVERNANCE AND A FREE PRESS		15
	Chapter 1: Media freedom is key to a well-governed society Aidan White, General Secretary, International Federation of Journalists	16
	Chapter 2: Should media mirror society or shape it? Edetaen Ojo, Executive Director, Media Rights Agenda, Lagos; Vice Chair, Media Foundation for West Africa, Accra	19
	Chapter 3: Keeping politicians on their toes Larry Kilman, Director of Communications, World Association of Newspapers	22
	Chapter 4: Defining governance Muzong W. Kodi, Regional Director for Africa and the Middle East, Transparency International	24
	Minding the credibility gap Kavi Chongkittavorn, Chairman, "The Nation"; South East Asia Press Alliance	26
PART 2 REGIONAL PERSPECTIVES		27
	Chapter 5: Mass media goes on the attack in Southeast Asia Shiela S. Coronel, Executive Director, Centre for Investigative Journalism, Philippines	28
	Chapter 6: How the Ukrainian media turned orange Olena Prytula, Editor-in-chief, Ukrayinska Pravda, Ukraine	31
	Chapter 7: Winds of democracy blow in the Arab world Magda Abu-Fadil, Director, Institute for Professional Journalists at the Lebanese American University, Beirut	33
	Chapter 8: How Singapore crushed the independent media Chee Soon Juan, Director, Open Singapore Centre; Chairman, Alliance for Reform and Democracy in Asia	36
	A campaign against jailing journalists for their work Arab Press Freedom Watch	39

MEDIA AND GOOD GOVERNANCE

PART 3	POVERTY, HUMAN RIGHTS AND THE MEDIA'S ROLE	41
	Chapter 9: Banned in Tunisia Sophie Piekarec, Manager, TUNeZINE.com	42
	Chapter 10: The dark forces that impede the public's right to know Donat M'Baya Tshimanga, President of Journalists in Danger, Democratic Republic of Congo	44
	Chapter 11: The failed experiment in development journalism Kunda Dixit, Editor-in-Chief, Nepali Times, Nepal	45
	Why development needs good journalism Luc-Joël Gregoire, Chief Economist, UN Development Programme	47
PART 4	ACCESS TO INFORMATION, A FUNDAMENTAL RIGHT	49
	Chapter 12: Access to information lags around the world Toby Mendel, Law Programme Director, ARTICLE 19	50
	Chapter 13: Obtaining information in a rumor society Remzi Lani, Director, Albanian Media Institute	53
	Chapter 14: Mongolia keeps its secrets Hashhuu Naranjargal, President, Globe International, an NGO supporting democracy in Mongolia	55
	Chapter 15: Tackling transparency in Mexico Ernesto Villanueva, President, Freedom of Information-Mexico (LIMAC)	56
	Fighting for free expression International Freedom of Expression Exchange	57
PART 5	THE ETHICS AND TRAINING OF JOURNALISTS	59
	Chapter 16: Training journalists for the global information era Hervé Bourges, President, International Union of the French-speaking Press	60
	Chapter 17: Raising professional standards in Africa Ibrahim Famakan Coulibaly, President, West African Journalists' Association	62
APPENDICES		63
	Declaration of Dakar	64
	The stories that can lead to a jail cell Remarks by Larry Kilman upon accepting the UNESCO/Guillermo Cano World Press Freedom Prize on behalf of Chinese journalist Cheng Yizhong	67
	Hold onto common sense amid terror and lies Cheng Yizhong, Laureate 2005 of UNESCO/Guillermo Cano World Press Freedom Prize	70